Millions of refugees face homelessness – UN

GENEVA (AFP) - Millions of refugees worldwide risk living on the street due to a lack of funds for shelters, the United Nations warned Wednesday, urging the private sector to help amid surging displacement.

Launching a global campaign called "Nobody Left Outside", the UN refugee agency said it still needed half a billion dollars (441 million euros) to provide adequate shelter.

"Without a major increase in funding and global support, millions of people fleeing war and persecution face homelessness or inadequate housing in countries such as Lebanon, Mexico and Tanzania," UNHCR said in a statement.

"Without a safe place to eat, sleep, study, store belongings and have privacy, the consequences to their health and welfare can be profound," it warned.

Conflicts, including the five-year war in Syria, have fuelled a global crisis with some 60 million people displaced from their homes worldwide.

Nearly 20 million of them have been forced to flee across international borders as refugees.

The UNHCR campaign aims to raise funds from the private sector to build or improve shelters for around two million refugees by 2018.

The agency each year purchases 70,000 tents and more than two million tarpaulins, and outside of camps helps refugees find housing and pay rent.

These operations are expected to cost $728 million this year alone, but UNHCR said so far only $158 million was available for use.

"Shelter is the foundation stone for refugees to survive and recover, and should be considered a non-negotiable human right," UN refugee chief Filippo Grandi said in the statement.

"As we tackle worldwide displacement on a level not seen since World War II, no refugee should be left outside," he insisted.

And at a time when anti-refugee sentiments have flared in many overburdened host communities, Grandi said ensuring that refugees are properly housed is a good way to ease tensions.

"Proper shelter for everyone is central to social cohesion," he said, stressing that "good homes make good neighbors."

Australian minister under fire for 'illiterate' refugees comment

SYDNEY (AFP) - Australia's immigration minister was accused of xenophobia Wednesday after he said increasing the nation's refugee intake would lead to "illiterate and innumerate" people claiming welfare or taking local jobs.

Peter Dutton was responding to proposals by the Labor opposition to boost Australia's annual refugee intake from 13,750 to 27,000 while the Greens want it raised to 50,000 as they outline policies ahead of national elections on July 2.

"For many people they won't be numerate or literate in their own language let alone English and this is a difficulty," Dutton told Sky News late Tuesday.

"Now, these people would be taking Australian jobs, there's no question about that."

"And for many of them they would be unemployed, they would languish in unemployment queues and on Medicare and the rest of it. So there would be a huge cost and there's no sense in sugarcoating that."

Labor frontbencher Chris Bowen, a former immigration minister, said the country had benefited hugely from the contribution of refugees over the years and criticized Dutton's comments.

"There are hundreds of thousands of refugees in Australia who've worked hard, who've educated themselves and their children and they will be shaking their heads at their minister today, in disgust frankly," he told reporters.

"If Peter Dutton owes anybody an apology it's not the Labor Party, it's them."

Greens immigration spokeswoman Sarah Hanson-Young went further, accusing Dutton of xenophobia.

Trump willing to meet with North Korea's Kim

NEW YORK (Reuters) - Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump said on Tuesday he is willing to talk to North Korean leader Kim Jong Un to try to stop Pyongyang's nuclear program, proposing a major shift in U.S. policy toward the isolated nation.

In a wide-ranging interview with Reuters, Trump also called for a renegotiation of the Paris climate accord, said he disapproved of Russian President Vladimir Putin's actions in eastern Ukraine, and said he would seek to dismantle most of the U.S. Dodd-Frank financial regulations if he is elected president.

The presumptive Republican nominee declined to share details of his plans to deal with North Korea, but said he was open to talking to its leader.

"I would speak to him, I would have no problem speaking to him," he said.

Asked whether he would try to talk some sense into the North Korean leader, Trump replied, "Absolutely."

North Korea's mission to the United Nations did not immediately respond to a request for comment on Trump's remarks.

Trump, 69, also said he would press China, Pyongyang's only major diplomatic and economic supporter, to help find a solution.
